Model Neighborhood Plan

(Neighborhood Free of Poverty)

“It takes an entire village to raise a single child”

“It takes an entire village to raise a single child,” goes the well known African proverb. It is a good starting point for free people to come together. In slavery Africans in America lost the distinction of family; passing a law to end slavery didn’t change this. Establishing ethnic structures for the fulfillment of the proverb above, means going beyond existing forms of family and community. It means establishing and empowering villages.

In the Future America Neighborhood Plan, Dr. Nkosi Ajanaku, Esquire, founder and chief researcher of the Future America Basic Research Institute, envisions the establishment of such structures. His envision entails a Sisterhood, a Brotherhood, a council of Elders, a model for how children will be raised beyond the negatives of slavery, based on self knowledge, and a step by step plan on how to bring about free and wealthy villages. Future America model neighborhoods are being established in cities around the country. You, too, can get involved on how to be a pioneer in saving the children and connecting with others who are working towards facilitating this same goal.
